Details of Armistice Talk at Kreutz Given in Posen Dispatch.

PARIS, March 7.—A Havas dispatch from Posen, dated Wednesday, tells of the meeting of the allied and German missions at the village of Kreutz, where negotiations for a new armistics be tween Germany and Poland will be car-

The allied mission arrived at Kreutz at 11:30 o'clock Wednesday morning and the train bearing the German deleand the train bearing the German delegates, headed by Baron von Rechenberg, who was accompanied by Dr. Draws, the Prussian minister of the interior, and Gen. Dommes, arrived at 12:20 o'clock. M. Noulens, former French ambassador to Russia, and Gen. Dunont introduced the delegates on the railway platform.

The courteous demeaner of the Germans was noted as being distinctly different from that shown at Brest-Litovak last year, when they were so truculent toward Leen Trotaky, the then Bolshevik minister of war, and his friends. This time the Germans were no uniforms. The delegates entered a sulcon car and seated themselves at a table in full year of the station, where a few soldiers in threadbare uniforms were longing about.

After the German delegates had declared their government retained full authority over the German troops along the Polish front, the armistice terms bearing on the Polish boundary were examined. A line of demarcation will be fixed by a subcommittee which will be given power to maintain a neutral zone between German and Polish forces there.

The allied commission demanded for-sone between German and Polish forces there.

The allied commission demanded formal guarantees for the landing of Polish troops at Danzig and their passage as far as the Polish frontier. The German delegales telegraphed the details of this demand to Berlin. The liberation of hostagres and the protection of Germans in Posen and Poles in Germany on a reciprocal basis was then taken up. The Germans declared they were ready to continue the deliberations at Posen and the allied delegales assented, undertaking to answer for the good behavior of the population during the period of negotiations.

AMUSEMENTS

Loew's Lyceum.

Loew's Lyceum.

A little comedy, some songs, more music and a bit of daring are some of the elements which go to make up the vaudeville array which is presented at Loew's Lyceum for the remainder of the week. The new bill started Thursday afternoon and has "The Big Punch" a dramatic playlet, as the bradline feature.

"The Big Punch" is purely dramatic in nature and was written for vaudeville purposes by Charles H. Smith, ruthor of probably a half hundred vaudeville sketches and also of "The Unknown Purple," which is now playing as a big dramatic production in New York The company in "The Big Punch" comprises capable players, featuring Vivien Allen.

Another feature of the bill which is of more than pussing interest is the comedy team of Al Cantield and Hern Rose, two delineators of the Hebrew Type, whose songs and parodies are up to the minute. These two were here last year and repeat their hit with new material.

John Barrymore, now starring in "Redemption" in New York, who is kept busy between the legitimate stage and the films, comes here in his latest comedy, "Here Comes the Bride," a story of a young man who is in love with a beautiful heiress, but who marries an old widow on a $100,000 wager,

"Daddy Long Legs."

Jean Webster's delightful fable.
"Daddy Long Legs," as given to the stage by Henry Miller, will be presented at the New Lyric Friday night and Saturday, with Saturday matines. "Daddy Long Lega" has been on tour in the cities during the past five years, and when other successes had been compelled to close on account of war conditions, this successful comedy continued each year to make a considerable profit for the producer. Its delightful story is filled with laughes and clever wit and satire skillfully done. The company which Mr. Miller has engaged is one of merit, the majority of whom have been identified with the play for several seasons and includes. Alice laying, Valerie Hickerson, Leonora Bradley, Maude Williams, Porothy McCord, Lillian Rose, Anna Merrick, Maude Lydiate, Robert Gleckler, Bert Chapman, Frank Kirk, John Powers and Robert Smith.

New Lyric.

New Lyric.

Henry Miller will present "Come Out of the Kitchen," a comedy by A. E. Thomas, which ran the greater part of last season at the Cohan theater in New York and for three months in Chicago at the New Lyric theater, next Tuesday and Wednesday, with Wednesday mattnes. "Come Out of the Kitchen" is in three acts and is based on the book by Alice Duer Miller. The seenes are laid in a Virginia household, where the young folk of a fine old Southern family, for the time being, while the house is rented to Burton Crane, a wealthy Northernsr, pretend to be servants. Charming Olivia Daingerfield becomes Jane Ellen, the cook with an Irish brogue, and it is in a trim Southern kitchen that the sentimental story, with Jane Ellen and Burton Crane as the central figures, develops. Henry Miller has provided a wonderful company.

Orpheum.

Who wrote "The Prodigal Girl." Walter Brower, the Jester, who is now making his second tour of the Ornbeum circuit, has been reciting the poem for a considerable time, but he does not know who the author is. It is the only part of his act that he did not write himself, and not only would he like to give full credit to the author, but he thinks it is quite likely that the unknown is a genius whose light is under a bushel. Brower saw the poem originally on a seran of paper that tooked as if it might have been torn from a national magazine. It was so badly torn that the comedian had difficulty in plecing the paper tegether and in some places he had to write lines into the poem where the paper was forn away altogether. "I thought it was good, said Brower, "and I memorized it I don't pretend to be a poet, but I recited it in vandeville and it met with general appeal.

Cleveland Aviator Breaks Neck, Yet Lives To Tell It

CAMP SHERMAN, CHILLICOTHE O., March ! - Lieut. John A. Logan, U. S. A., of Cleveland, is one of the few men who have sustained broken necks and is still alive to tell the story of how it happened. The lieutenant is in the hase hospital here, and attending surgeans say he will enjoy life for many years to come, despite the broken neck. Lieut. Logan, an aviator, sustained the injury while on duty in Frace. He went up one day wer the Vonges sector, and engaged several German planes. A piece of shell from one of the enemy's guns but his motor out of commission and the officer was forced to volplang. He lost control and had the preference of diving on a house or landing on the ground. He chose the latter, and when he was dragged from the wrecked machine, it was found that he had received only a few slight acratches. He rejoined his squadron, being able to walk, but that night his right side became paralyzed. Surgeons made an examination and found that Logan's neck was broken. This was the fourth accident in which Lieut. Logan figures, for, previous to going into active service, he was injured in three training accidents. geans say he will enjoy life for many
